	Procedure: We ask participants to think and write individually about what they think about the workshop or group meeting. Variation: If the group has done some concrete work on a certain theoretical topic it is a good way to reflect about their next step in practise. The group members who have a red nailed foot are asked to tell the whole group their feedback (or their next step). Important is that they don't have to tell it if they don't want.
